Senate Leadership

- Republicans Majority: McConnell (R-Kentucky) is expected to be reelected by the majority of the GOP caucus as Majority leader. Prior to the elections when current Minority Leader Reid announced his intentions to retire at the end of his term, New York Senator Chuck Schumer was already primed to take the helm as the next Democratic leader in the new Congress.

	Majority Leader	Minority Leader
Current	Mitch McConnell(Ky.)	Harry Reid (Nv)
Republican majority	McConnell	Chuck Schumer (NY)

Senate Appropriations Committee

- Republicans Majority: Thad Cochran (R-Miss.) would remain chairman. Patty Murray (D-Wash.) expressed interest in succeeding Barbara Mikulski (D-Md.) as the panel's top Democrat, though she could seek a leadership role. Dick Durbin (D-Ill.) or another Democrat could also take the position.
- Other notes: Murray's move to Appropriations from the Health, Education, Labor & Pensions Committee could have a domino effect on several other committees

Senate Finance Committee

Senate Small Business Committee

- Republican Majority : Jim Risch (R-Idaho) could succeed retiring chairman David Vitter (R-La.). Ranking Member Jeanne Shaheen (D-N.H.) would retain her position, barring changes elsewhere. If Risch moves to a different committee, Marco Rubio (R-Fla.) could be next in line.

- Democrats: 194
 - (193 decided + 1 likely win in CA-7)

House Projections: Democrats Pickup 7 however Republicans hold on to majority .

House Leadership

- Republicans Majority: The only sure bet going into Tuesday was that the House of Representatives would remain in GOP control. Nancy Pelosi will undoubtedly be reelected as the leader of the Democratic caucus. However question exist whether the Speaker's gavel will continue to reside with Paul Ryan – who has had a contentious relationship with now President-elect Trump and who's own members (HFC) might prevent him from garnering the votes needed for election. Leadership elections will take place Nov. 15th.
